SWE Meetings are held in the
BCC GSL at 8pm

SWE held its first ever "Green and Yellow Dinner" to celebrate the successful completion of this year's SWELL mentoring program. With around 70 leaders and learners participating in this year's program, it was indeed worth celebrating. Members and faculty attended, and students dressed to impress in Green and Yellow. The colorfully decorated atmosphere along with great food, a chance to dress up and just chat with other members of SWELL was a welcome break from hectic classes and exams. Certificates and t-shirts were given out to all members who were a part of the program. Prizes were given out to the best leader and best learner based on the accounts of the leaders and learners who took the time to write in about the awesome experiences they had with their leader or learner. With even a prize awarded to the "best dressed", it was definitely a SWELL night to remember.

No 2nd Chance for 1st Impression ~ Nov. 8

On Nov. 8, Marc Baum came to Rutgers to deliver a short workshop on how to make the best first impression, because you don't get a second chance to do that. With a few written exercises and diagrams, we were well on our way to landing that perfect research position or internship. After the meeting, there was a short resume critiques. This helped prepare SWE members for the career fair.
